Teaser	As a specialist with academic training, you can obtain a residence permit for a period of six months to look for a job if you meet certain requirements.
Volltext	You can obtain a residence permit for the purpose of seeking employment for skilled workers if you have a completed university degree. If you do not have a German university degree, your degree must either be recognised or comparable with a German university degree. You can have your degree recognised or established as comparable before you enter Germany (see further information). If you are already in Germany, you can obtain a residence permit for the purpose of seeking employment if you were in possession of a residence title for gainful employment or a residence title for the purpose of an EU study-related internship immediately beforehand. If you wish to pursue employment in a regulated profession, the necessary permit to pursue the profession must already have been granted or promised at the time the residence title for the purpose of seeking employment is issued. Regulated professions are professional activities whose admission or exercise is tied to the possession of certain professional qualifications by legal or administrative regulations. Professions regulated in Germany are, for example, doctor, nurse, lawyer, teacher, educator or engineer. With the residence permit for job-seeking purposes, you can take up a trial job for up to ten hours per week, which the qualification qualifies you to do. The residence permit is issued for up to six months.
