Voraussetzungen

Your application for public appointment and swearing in as an expert is subject to the following requirements:

- There must be a general need for expert services in the subject area you have named. In this context, it is irrelevant how many experts already exist for the subject area in question. The only thing that matters is whether the subject area is of general importance. If it is a subject area for which experts have already been appointed in the past, the general need was already affirmed at that time and is therefore to be assumed.
- You must provide evidence of your special expertise in the field you have been appointed for. This means that you must have above-average knowledge, experience and skills in the relevant field. In addition to evidence in the form of documents to be provided by you (certificates, expert reports prepared by yourself,
