Teaser	As a company in the main and ancillary construction sector, you can use the prequalification procedure to identify yourself to public contracting authorities and be entered in the official register of prequalified companies (PQ-VOB).
Volltext	In order to participate in public contracts, your company must prove that none of the legally defined formal grounds for exclusion apply. Prequalification corresponds to certification with the difference that the validity is not confirmed by a certificate, but by the currently valid entry in the official PQ-VOB directory. The entry in the official PQ-VOB register is regarded as proof of suitability, meaning that you only need to quote the PQ number each time you submit a tender. As a prequalified company, you have a presumption of suitability. This means that the evidence provided may not be called into question without justification. As a company in the main construction and ancillary construction trades, you can apply for prequalification at one of the six prequalification offices of the PQ Association. The PQ Association manages the official PQ-VOB directory, issues the license to operate as a PQ body and assumes responsibility for technical supervision. It ensures a standardized prequalification procedure. After a final check by the selected prequalification body and the PQ Association, your company will be entered in the official PQ-VOB directory. In order to maintain your prequalification, you will be notified by the prequalification body you have selected which certificates of suitability expire; you must submit these in good time or, in the case of some certificates, you can also instruct your prequalification body to do so. In addition to the evidence required for prequalification, you can submit further evidence from the company. These can be viewed by the contracting authority as "additional evidence". The documents checked by the prequalification bodies can only be viewed in the protected section of the official directory by those contracting authorities or their representatives who have registered with the PQ-Verein. However, the company details and pre-qualified service areas are generally accessible in the public section of the Official Directory. The directory is updated daily.

on their website.

- Fill these out and attach all the required documents.
- You can either send these to the prequalification body digitally or by post.

Your selected prequalification body will be happy to answer any questions you may have.

A contract must be concluded between your company and the prequalification body. This is prepared by the PQ body.

The prequalification bodies check whether the registration requirements have been met and request additional documents if necessary.

If all registration requirements are met, the PQ Association will enter you in the official PQ-VOB directory.

You will receive a prequalification number (PQ number).

In the case of public tenders, you must inform the contracting authority of this PQ number in your tender (e.g. on form 213 of the VHB Bund).

Bearbeitungsdauer

1 - 2 Woche(n)

The processing period for reviewing the application begins as soon as a PQ center has received a complete and unobjectionable application.

Up to 6 weeks. The processing period for reviewing the application begins as soon as a PQ center has received a complete and unobjectionable application.

Frist

1 Jahr(e)

The entry in the register is valid until the evidence provided expires and is not resubmitted. If there are any changes to your company with regard to the proof of suitability and reliability, the company is obliged to inform the Official List, as the Official List may then have to be amended (and the entry may have to be deleted).

Hinweise

There is another directory for companies in the supply and service sector. This register is called the Official Register of Prequalified Companies (AVPQ). In addition, the Hessian Prequalification Register (HPQR) exists as an official register in which companies from the construction, supply and service sectors can be entered.

Rechtsbehelf

Appeals against the decision of the prequalification body can be lodged with the Appeals Committee of the PQ Association. The prequalification body can also appeal against decisions of the PQ Association to the Appeals Committee. The complaints procedure is regulated in detail in the PQ Association's complaints regulations. Appeals have no suspensive effect against the respective decision

Kurztext

- Official directory in the construction sector (VOB) Registration
- The official directory (PQ-VOB) lists companies in the main construction and ancillary construction trades that have proven their suitability for public contracts.
- This saves companies considerable time and money.
- Exemption from guarantor and general contractor liability.
- Preferential request for restricted tenders.
- Public clients can be sure that the check is serious, up to date and that bids do not have to be excluded from public tenders due to incorrect proof of suitability.
- Possible for all companies in the main and ancillary construction trades.
- Responsible: Prequalification bodies of the PQ
