Sachverhalt

personally, impartially and with priority over other activities,

- you are not subject to any professional instructions, including those of your employer, when carrying out your expert activities in individual cases, you can sign your expert reports yourself and stamp them with the round stamp awarded to you and
- you are released by your employer to the extent necessary for your expert activities.

Kosten

Depends on the administrative fee schedule of the respective federal state

Verfahrensablauf

- You submit the application and all required documents online or in writing to the responsible office.
- The application and the documents and expert opinions submitted will be pre-checked. If this preliminary examination shows that the requirements according to the expert regulations of the Chamber of Agriculture of the respective federal state and the administrative regulations are obviously not fulfilled, the application will be rejected.
- If an appointment is considered after the preliminary examination, the application including the submitted expert reports will be submitted to the members of the expert committee for an evaluative opinion.
- As the applicant, you will generally have to demonstrate your particular expertise, which includes in particular the ability to present even difficult technical problems in writing and orally in a comprehensible and understandable manner, to the expert panel.
- As a rule, a technical discussion with the members of the expert panel takes place to examine the applicant's technical suitability, which may also include a written elaboration under supervision in preparation for the oral hearing.
- The application will then either be approved and you will receive a corresponding decision, or the application will be rejected. A written decision will be issued on the rejection, unless the application is withdrawn.
