1. Inform online

- A first step can be to gather information online. For example, visit the social platform for practical information, early recognition of signs of addiction and support options or the online platform DigiSucht.

2. contact the advice center:

- You, as a potentially addicted person or family member, contact the counseling center in person via telephone, email or chat. An appointment is made or the counseling is facilitated online.

3. initial consultation and needs assessment:

- In an initial meeting, the individual needs and the type of support required in the area of addiction prevention are discussed.

4. counseling and education:

- The counseling center provides information about addiction, prevention measures and appropriate steps to overcome the problem. This can take place online, in the form of flyers or information brochures, as well as in person.

5. individual prevention plan:

- In some cases, based on the initial consultation and needs assessment, a customized prevention plan will be developed that is tailored to your specific needs and goals.

6. ongoing support and guidance:

- The counseling center provides ongoing support, counseling sessions to ensure that the preventive measures are implemented effectively and that the person concerned does not become addicted.
