Teaser	Do you have a livestock business abroad and have already received an identification number? Then you can have it extended after 2 years if you need it again.
Volltext	If you run a livestock farm based in another EU country or in a third country, you can obtain an identification number from the Federal Office for Agriculture and Food (BLE) that shows the type of farming. With this identification number, another food company that sells food produced from your animals in Germany can apply for voluntary animal husbandry labeling, which provides end consumers with information about the way the animals are kept. Alternatively, you can use the identification number to sell your food by way of direct marketing with animal husbandry labeling. The identification number is limited to a period of 2 years and can be extended by the BLE for 2 years at a time. To do so, you must prove that your livestock farm continues to meet the requirements of the notified farming method.
