Sachverhalt

- Recognition of maternity applies only in cases where the filiation of a child, not married parents, is governed by the law of the State in which the child has his habitual residence or, alternatively, by the national law of the mother. - A recognition under condition or time determination is ineffective.
- Recognition also requires the consent of the child if the mother does not have parental authority in this respect.
- Anyone who is limited in legal capacity can only recognize himself, but requires the consent of the legal representative. For legally incapacitated, the legal representative may recognize with the permission of the family court.; if the legal representative is a supervisor, the approval of the supervision court is required.
- For a legally incompetent child, or a child who is not yet 14 years old, only the legal representative can agree to the recognition.
