least eight weeks before the expiry of the time limit at the immigration authority responsible for your place of residence.

The conditions for renewal are the same as for grant. In particular, there should continue to be a public interest in your employment. A public interest in employment can be justified, for example,

- if there is a regional or supra-regional public interest in an employer's products or services or if there is a shortage of certain goods or services at the employer's location (regional interests). Supply or municipal policy reasons can also play a role here.
- where significant investments and/or a significant number of jobs are created or secured; if the establishment of a company is associated with a sustainable improvement in the sales or market opportunities of domestic companies or if it concerns the establishment of a production plant for technically high-quality (future-proof) and/or particularly environmentally friendly products (economic interests).
- if employment maintains or creates jobs (labour market policy interests).

The private, operational interest of an employer alone is not sufficient to establish a public interest in employment.

Your qualifications are not decisive for the extension of your residence permit.

When you first issued your residence permit, the Federal Employment Agency gave its consent. If the validity of the consent has expired, it must be issued again for the extension of your residence permit.

You may have been obliged to attend an integration course when you first issued your residence permit. If this is the case, this must be taken into account when extending your residence permit. If you have not yet taken part in an integration course, the Foreigners' Registration Office may reject your application for an extension of your residence permit. If you have not yet completed the integration course, the residence permit will only be extended by one year until you successfully complete it or provide proof that your integration into social life has taken place elsewhere.

In the event of an extension, your residence permit will be limited again. The duration of the time limit depends on the duration of your employment contract or the period of validity of the approval of the Federal Employment Agency.

As a rule, the residence permit cannot be extended if this was already excluded when the residence permit was issued or last extended.

- Residence permit for the purpose of gainful employment Extension for the purpose of employment in the public interest
- The residence permit for employment on the basis of a public, in particular regional, economic or labour market policy interest may be extended if the limitation of the residence permit ends and the employment is to be continued.
- The extension must be applied for at least eight weeks before the expiry of the temporary residence permit.
- The conditions for renewal are the same as for grant.
- If the period of validity of the consent obtained when the residence permit was issued has expired, the consent of the Federal Employment Agency must be obtained again.
- Insofar as the obligation to attend an integration course was pronounced when the residence permit was issued, it must be proven that the obligation has been complied with. If the integration course has not yet been completed, the Foreigners' Registration Office may refuse the extension or extend the residence permit only for one year until the course has been successfully completed or proof has been provided that the integration into social life has taken place elsewhere.
- In the course of the extension, the residence permit will be limited again.
- An extension is excluded if this has already been excluded by the Foreigners' Registration Office at the
