Teaser	Have you completed a vocational preparation measure and would like to have it credited to your training period? Find out more here.
Volltext	You can have your previous vocational training credited to your training period. This shortens your training time. The following vocational training courses can be credited: • attendance at a vocational school, • a vocational preparation measure (e.g. vocational preparation year, basic vocational training year). Credit will only be granted if you submit an application together with your training company. The federal states have different regulations for crediting. If a federal state has not made any legal provisions on this, the competent authority will decide on a case-by-case basis whether your previous vocational training will be credited.
Erforderliche Unterlagen	• Proof of vocational training, for example through: Diploma Certificate
Voraussetzungen	• Vocational training

Hinweise	You can also shorten your training period if you have a higher school leaving certificate or have already completed vocational training. In addition, you can shorten the training period if you have already gained professional experience in part-time jobs. If you have already acquired the skills and knowledge elsewhere, you can also apply for a reduction in the training period. Each apprenticeship has a minimum training period that you must fulfill.
Rechtsbehelf
Kurztext	• Previous vocational training and higher-level school leaving certificates can be counted towards the training period. • As a result, the training period can be shortened. • The following times can be credited: Attendance at a vocational school, vocational preparation measure, School leaving certificates via Hauptschule • Application must be submitted jointly by the trainee and the training company.
