Sachverhalt

The residence permit is limited in time. As a rule, their validity depends on the remaining duration of the training or further education.

If you were obliged to attend an integration course when you were issued a residence permit, you must prove that you have complied with this obligation. If you have not yet completed the integration course, the Foreigners' Registration Office may refuse the extension or extend the residence permit only for one year until you have successfully completed the course or proof has been provided that your integration into social life has taken place elsewhere.

If you have not yet reached the age of 18, a person entitled to your personal care must agree to the extended stay for the purpose of continuing in-company training or further education.

During the qualified vocational training, you are allowed to pursue employment. However, the extension of your residence permit is only possible if the successful completion of your vocational training is not jeopardized by the exercise of gainful employment.

After successful completion of qualified vocational training, your residence permit can be extended for up to twelve months to look for a job.

If your qualified vocational training or further education ends prematurely for reasons beyond your control, you may be given the opportunity to look for another training place for a period of up to six months.

During the validity of a residence permit for in-company training and further education, it is in principle possible to switch to another qualified vocational training. Likewise, if you meet the necessary requirements, you can apply to the Foreigners' Registration Office to obtain a residence permit for employment as a specialist, for employment with strong professional knowledge, for studying or for other purposes to which you are legally entitled (change of purpose).
