You must have the guns rendered unusable by a gunsmith/gun manufacturer. They will then issue you with a deactivation certificate as proof. You must keep the deactivation certificate together with the weapons that have been rendered unusable or take it with you when transporting such weapons. If you lose the deactivation certificate, you must report this immediately to the competent weapons authority.

If you have declared the weapon rendered unusable and presented the certificate of deactivation, the competent firearms authority will remove this weapon from your Permit for the Possession and Acquisition of Weapons (WBK) and, if applicable, from your European Firearms Pass.
