of societal, social or political contexts in order to promote the participation in the state, society or company that is desirable in a democratic community.

- Continuing vocational training should enable employees to maintain, improve or expand their professional qualifications and at the same time provide them with a not inconsiderable amount of knowledge of social contexts so that they can recognize their place in the company or society. It follows from the legal definition that, in addition to subject-specific content, socio-political aspects must also be taught in continuing vocational training events (e.g. language courses, IT courses) for at least six hours per week. The aforementioned principles of political education apply accordingly.

- Educational leave for training in the performance of an honorary office is intended to enable employees to carry out an assumed honorary office. In addition to imparting the knowledge required to carry out voluntary work, employees must also be given a not inconsiderable amount of knowledge of socio-political contexts so that they can recognize their position in the company or society. Here too, it follows from the legal definition that, in addition to specialist knowledge, socio-political aspects must also be taught for at least 20% of the duration of the course.
