Teaser	As an employer, you can seek advice on your obligations to ensure the safety and health of your employees.
Volltext	The employer is responsible for the occupational health and safety of its employees. Effective occupational health and safety is possible if the potential hazards in the workplace are identified and prevented by appropriate measures. In order to be able to ensure this, employers are required by the legislator to comply with the provisions on the areas of <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Operational</li> <li>• social and</li> <li>• Medical</li> </ul> Occupational health and safety has been provided with a modern set of rules. As a rule, employers and commissioned persons are advised on the legally compliant implementation of the legal requirements during inspections as part of the monitoring. The advice includes an explanation of the obligations of employers to ensure safety and health at work and the organisational measures required to do so. The aim of the advice is to make the employer aware of the obligations incumbent on him, the consequences of infringements and the possibilities for fulfilling his legal obligations and identifying hazards as well as defining and enforcing occupational health and safety measures. Advice at the request of employers or their representatives, e.g. in the case of complex planning or difficult questions about facilities and procedures for occupational health and safety and safety technology, can be provided in individual cases if the appropriate resources are available.
