Teaser	If you only use a vehicle regularly during certain periods, you have the option of applying for a seasonal license plate.
Volltext	You can apply to the registration authority for a seasonal license plate for a certain period each year. This is the period of use during which you can drive your vehicle on public roads each year. A seasonal license plate serves to identify the owner and the period of use. You can use this option if you own a motorcycle, a convertible or a motorhome, for example. When you register your vehicle, you specify the operating period during which you wish to use the vehicle each year. You must take out car insurance corresponding to the operating period in advance. The operating period can be between 2 and 11 full months per year. Outside the operating period, you may not drive the vehicle on public roads and must park it away from public roads and places, for example in a private parking space. The operating period is shown on the right-hand side of the license plate as a fractional number. "05/11", for example, means that you may use the vehicle from May to November.
