Volltext	A declaration acknowledging paternity to a child, as well as the mother's declaration of consent, can be certified at any registry office, at youth welfare offices and before notaries. An effective acknowledgement of paternity can take place if there is no paternity of another man to this child. The acknowledgement of paternity and the declaration of consent of the mother are certified in public form. An acknowledgement of paternity is possible even before the birth of the child. According to German law, the woman is the mother of the child who gave birth to the child. In principle, recognition of maternity is not required. If recognition of maternity or a declaration of consent from a legal representative is required, these must also be certified by a registry office, by the youth welfare office, or by notaries. If the foreign national law of the mother or father requires an acknowledgement of maternity, it can also be publicly notarized. The same rules as for the
