Volltext	Almost every city has counselling centres for people with addiction problems. Trained and experienced counsellors work there: psychologists, social workers, doctors. Directly affected persons, relatives and, above all, parents can turn to these offices. Some of these counselling centres specialise in addictions to certain addictive substances or behavioural addictions (e.g. gambling addiction, excessive media consumption). The counselling centres work free of charge. During the consultation, the confidential information is not passed on to the police. On request, all conversations are anonymous. Just like doctors, addiction counselors are obliged to remain silent even when it comes to illegal drugs.
