Volltext	Children are among the most vulnerable road users and therefore deserve our special consideration. Primary school children – especially school beginners – are particularly at risk in road traffic. Traffic accidents often occur because the children are not yet up to the demands of today's traffic conditions. Although the safe way to school is an integral part of teaching at school, it should be practiced with the children at an early stage. Caregivers should always set a good example and observe the traffic rules – even as pedestrians – because children learn more through their exemplary behavior than through constant hints and admonitions. School route plans are drawn up in the schools, bus, pupil and parent guides can be set up.
