Teaser	If no EC type approval exists for your registration-free vehicle, you must apply for type approval before the vehicle can be registered for road use.
Volltext	The general type approval is generally issued to the manufacturer for vehicles to be manufactured or produced in series, following an inspection carried out at the manufacturer's expense. An individual type approval (EBE) is always required if a vehicle has been manufactured individually or in small series production, if it is a self-designed vehicle or if it has been imported from abroad without EC type approval. Even a vehicle that has already been taken out of service, which has been deleted from the traffic register after seven years and is to receive a new registration, requires an individual type approval. The individual operating permit is issued by the local registration authority for an individual vehicle and is only valid for this vehicle. For vehicles that do not belong to an approved type, the operating permit must be applied for. Unless it is expressly limited in time or withdrawn, the operating license remains valid until the vehicle is finally taken out of service. Section 19 (2) and (3) of the Road Traffic Licensing Regulations regulate when the operating license expires. If modifications are made which 1\ the type of vehicle is changed,
