Teaser	Would you like to apply for compensation for disadvantages for admission?
Volltext	The study places available in the hardship quota are awarded to applicants for whom the rejection of their application for admission would constitute exceptional hardship. Exceptional hardship is deemed to exist if special social or family reasons relating to the applicant's own person make it absolutely necessary for them to take up their studies immediately. Important: However, this is only the case if the prospective student meets the general and special admission requirements for the desired degree program. The hardship quota in the allocation procedures with nationwide admission restrictions is 2%. For degree programs with local admission restrictions at universities, the hardship quota is 2%; for degree programs at universities of applied sciences 5%. Please note: This option does not necessarily apply to the application procedure for universities of art and music.
Erforderliche Unterlagen	The documents required depend on the type of hardship. Examples : Specialist medical report

Modul

Sachverhalt

The reasons for the hardship case must be substantiated by a specialist medical report that adequately comments on the reasons listed. It should contain statements on the origin, severity, course and treatment options of the impairment and a prognosis of its further course that are comprehensible to medical laypersons.

Additional evidence

Since each individual case is different, applicants should check whether they have additional evidence (in particular, a certificate of severe disability or a notice of assessment from the pension office). A (severe) disability can supplement the specialist medical report and support the justification for immediate admission. However, proof of a (severe) disability alone is not sufficient for recognition as a case of hardship.

Please contact your university of choice to find out which documents are required in individual cases for locally admission-restricted degree programs. For applications to nationally admission-restricted degree programs, please contact the Foundation for University Admission.
