Volltext	Insolvency counseling is a supplement to general debt counseling. Both services advise people in and over-indebted who are in need of expert help. The task of the insolvency advice centers is to advise people who may be eligible to apply for consumer insolvency proceedings. Insolvency advice is provided by public and independent providers (in particular local authorities and charities) as well as private providers. They can be recognized by the state as a suitable body within the meaning of the Insolvency Code (InsO). As a recognized body, you advise and represent debtors in out-of-court settlements with creditors and, if necessary, support the debtor in applying for and carrying out insolvency proceedings. You need to be recognized as a suitable body in consumer insolvency proceedings if you want to be entitled to issue a certificate of an unsuccessful attempt to reach an agreement with creditors in consumer insolvency proceedings. The legal basis for the recognition of the insolvency advice center is the state-specific laws on the implementation of consumer insolvency proceedings in accordance with the Insolvency Code. In order to be recognized as a suitable office, it is particularly necessary that <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• the office must be staffed by at least one person with sufficient practical experience in debtor counseling,</li> <li>• the office must have reliable and appropriately</li> </ul>
