Teaser	Are you of the opinion that your child cannot successfully participate in school lessons and would like special educational support? Read here what options you have.
Volltext	Special educational needs may exist for children and young people who are so impaired in their educational, development and learning opportunities that they cannot be adequately supported in the lessons of the general school without special educational support. If your child has such an impairment, which cannot be compensated for by pedagogical support measures alone, then you can submit an application for the determination of special educational needs. Special education priorities are: 1. Learn 2. Language 3. intellectual development 4. emotional-social development, 5. physical-motor development, 6. Hear 7. See. A need for special educational support may also exist in students with established autism or long-term illnesses.
