Teaser	For the discharge of waste water into surface water or groundwater, a wastewater charge is levied in Germany. If certain conditions are met, the waste water levy can be offset against investments made for the implementation of measures.
Volltext	They discharge wastewater into a body of water and have investments for: • the construction/extension of waste water treatment plants/rainwater relief plants, or • the construction/extension of facilities which serve to fulfil the conditions for the exemption from the supply of rainwater, or • the connection of one waste water treatment plant to another, or • the connection of small dischargers to a waste water treatment plant effected? Then they can offset this against the wastewater charge to be paid or already paid to the respective federal state if all necessary conditions are met. This leads to a reduction in the amount of the levy to be paid or to the reimbursement of any amount of levy already paid. The expenses incurred may be offset against the total levy due for this plant in the three years preceding the commissioning of the plant. The billing period is determined to the day. Offsetting of the increased part of the waste water charge due to an exceedance of a monitoring value is ruled out. You must apply to the competent authority for the settlement of the expenses incurred on the corresponding forms. The competent authority is happy to help with any questions that arise and, if necessary, demands further documents or evidence of the clearing measure to
