of the minimum wage in accordance with the Minimum Wage Act. If you as an employer are bound by a collective agreement or church labor law regulations or refer to a relevant collective agreement, your subsidy will be calculated on the basis of the wages actually paid.

The subsidy also covers your employee's insurance with a flat-rate social security contribution. The contribution to unemployment insurance is excluded.

You will not receive a subsidy for one-off payments such as Christmas bonuses or vacation pay.

Support during employment (coaching)

In addition, the Jobcenter will cover the costs of coaching for a maximum of 5 years to support your previously long-term unemployed employees, for example with problems at their new workplace, with their family or with difficulties in organizing their everyday life. This makes it easier for your new employees to get used to everyday working life after a long period of unemployment.

The employees receiving support should take part in this coaching. In principle, the coaching can take place during or outside working hours, at the workplace or at another location. However, you must release your sponsored employee from work for the coaching in the first year of the sponsorship; in the case of coaching during working hours, you must continue to pay the employee's salary. The need for coaching is determined on an individual basis. Your business needs will be taken into account when scheduling the coaching.

The coaching is designed in such a way that it also takes into account the special requirements that you or your company place on your staff. However, the coaching does not include technical training.

The coach will involve you as required and will be available to answer any questions relating to the employee receiving support.

Further training costs

On application, the Jobcenter will also reimburse you up to EUR 3,000 for any further training required during the employment, so-called course costs, as well as for in-house training. Your employees can also be reimbursed for additional travel costs and additional childcare costs incurred during further training.

The decision on the funding of further training costs is at the discretion of the Jobcenter. You do not have a legal entitlement to funding.

Internship

The funding also allows you to complete internships outside your company with another employer within the funded employment relationship.
