Before you can get married, you have to register the marriage. In the past, this was also known as "ordering the banns". The parties to the marriage should register the intended marriage in person at the registry office where one of the parties to the marriage has their place of residence or habitual abode.

To speed up the procedure, you can send the registry office your preferred date for the marriage as well as the data required to check your eligibility for marriage by pre-registration. The place where you register the marriage does not necessarily have to be the place where your marriage is to take place. In principle, you can marry at any registry office in Germany.

A civil marriage and a church wedding are independent of each other. No witnesses need to be present at the marriage ceremony. However, if you wish, you can appoint one or two people as witnesses.

Whether you wish to have a joint or separate surname during the marriage can be decided at the time of the marriage or at a later date.

Note: If both future spouses live abroad, you can register the marriage at the registry office where the wedding is to take place.

Erforderliche Unterlagen

For German nationals entering into their first marriage

- valid identity card or passport
- Certificate of residence from the registration office (not older than four weeks)
- if the birth was notarised in Germany: certified printout from the register of births or copy from the register of births (from the registry office of the place of birth)
- if the birth was notarised abroad: current birth certificate

For partners who were already married or living in a registered civil partnership (additional):

- Marriage certificate and final divorce decree; in the event of death, the marriage certificate and the death certificate of the former spouse, or
- Proof of the establishment and dissolution of the last civil partnership

Note: If the divorce took place abroad, you should enquire in advance at the registry office whether a recognition procedure is required. Please bring this with you:

- all marriage certificates
- all final divorce judgements (with facts and reasons for the decision)
- a complete translation by a sworn translator in Germany

For partners who have children together or who have custody of children from previous marriages (additionally):

- Birth certificates of the children

In the case of a partner from abroad

- valid identity card/passport or other proof of identification
- Proof of nationality, if this is not evident from the identity card or passport
- Certificate of residence from the registration office (not older than four weeks)
- Birth certificate
- Certificate of no impediment to marriage

For partners from countries that do not issue "certificates of no impediment to marriage", it is advisable to seek advice from the registry office about exemption from the obligation to present a certificate of no impediment to marriage. This is issued by the President of the Higher Regional Court. The registrar takes the application and forwards it.

Foreign language documents:

For foreign-language documents, the registry office generally requires complete translations into German, prepared by a translator publicly appointed and sworn in Germany.

Foreign documents often also require legalisation by the competent foreign authority.

Documents from other EU member states

For civil status documents issued by another EU member state, it is generally sufficient to submit the national document with the translation aid in accordance with the EU Apostille Regulation (Regulation (EU) 2016/1191).

Tip: You can obtain the translation aid from the authority that also issues the document. It is recommended that you apply for both together.

Further documents:

The registry office may request additional documents, such as the naturalisation certificate.
