Volltext	Many municipalities offer parents whose baby or toddler is to be looked after care by a day carer (childminder) as an alternative to a place in a crèche. If there is a special need or as a supplement, this can also be provided for older children. The childminder requires a care licence. This licence gives parents the assurance that the childminder and their home environment have been checked for suitability to take in daycare children and are suitable. Note: You can also look for a carer without a local authority placement. However, the local authority will only contribute to the costs if the childminder has an official care licence and the daycare centre is included in the so-called demand plan.
Erforderliche Unterlagen	• Proof of medical examination and proof of immunisation • if applicable, proof that both parents are employed, in training or otherwise in need of assistance
Voraussetzungen	• physical and mental health • the child should be at least six months old (exception see "Deadline / Duration")

Sachverhalt

- Ask the local authority or the local youth welfare organisation (youth welfare office) to recommend a childminder.
- Introduce yourself and your child to the childminder and make sure that the type of childcare meets your expectations.
- If there is mutual agreement, you will conclude a childcare contract with the childminder. It contains legal agreements and regulates, among other things, the daily childcare hours.
- Some childminders also accept babies after the end of the maternity protection period (children aged eight weeks and over); registration is then by arrangement.
- Have your child medically examined before starting childcare.
- The carer requires a care licence.

Bearbeitungsdauer

Frist
