Erforderliche Unterlagen

- Proof of vocational training and previous professional activity (including activities and examinations that have nothing to do with the subject of the exemption application!)
- photocopies of certificates and proof of employment in a single copy
- details of the business you wish to run as owner, partner or manager (including details of an existing business that is to be subsequently entered in the Register of Craftsmen)
- details of the master craftsman examination
- if you are yet to take the master craftsman's examination: Submission of your "examination timetable" (registration and attendance certificates for preparatory courses, stating the start date, duration and regular attendance); if applicable, the authorisation notice
- justification of the exceptional case

Voraussetzungen

According to the legal regulations, an exceptional reason only exists if it would be an unreasonable burden for you at the time of application or afterwards to take the master craftsman's examination before starting work as a self-employed person or company manager.

Time and professional overload is not generally recognised as a reason because these burdens are imposed on every candidate for a master craftsman examination.

It must be clear from your professional background that you not only have the specialised theoretical knowledge and practical skills of a master craftsman. You must also have basic commercial, business management and legal knowledge in order to be able to run a craft business independently.

The applicant can only be a natural person. Companies are excluded as applicants.
