Volltext	You can appeal to the municipal arbitration boards in Saxony in the context of civil disputes in the following cases: * property claims such as the enforcement of a payment * Claims under neighbour and tenancy law * non-pecuniary claims due to violation of honour However, the conciliation procedure is not possible in this respect in the case of disputes * which fall within the jurisdiction of the family courts and labour courts * involve the violation of personal honour in the press, radio and television; * in which the Federation, the Länder, the municipalities or other corporations, institutions or foundations under public law are involved. Note: In Saxony, recourse to a municipal arbitration board is on a voluntary basis and is not a prerequisite for civil litigation in court. In the case of some criminal offences that can be dealt with in the criminal courts in the context of a private action, it is mandatory to conduct an attempt at atonement before bringing a private action. This applies to the following offences: * Insult * negligent and simple intentional bodily harm * Trespass

- * Damage to property
- * Threat
- * Violation of the secrecy of correspondence

Note: If there is a public interest in prosecution, charges will be brought in these cases by the public prosecutor's office.

The arbitration board proceedings are conducted by an honorary justice of the peace. The proceedings before the arbitration boards serve the purpose of settling legal disputes by reaching an agreement between the parties.
