Verfahrensablauf	Preventive Check-Ups

Modul
Sachverhalt

- The antenatal check-ups are initially once a month. From the 33rd week of pregnancy every 14 days. If you are working, you must be released from work for all check-ups without any loss of earnings.
- Three ultrasound examinations are scheduled as part of prenatal care: usually in the third, sixth and eighth month of pregnancy. If there are certain risks or complications, more frequent ultrasound examinations may be ordered.

Prenatal Diagnostics

- Prenatal diagnostic examinations, which are used to detect foetal malformations, infections, familial diseases and chromosomal abnormalities, are not part of the normal preventive medical check-ups.
- The doctor must inform you of the possibilities of prenatal diagnostics if certain risks are present, for example if you are already 35 years or older. The decision to undergo prenatal diagnostics is entirely up to you - you should therefore seek detailed advice on the type and purpose of the test.

Mother's Pass (Mutterpass)

- The Mutterpass is issued at the first check-up.
- The results of all examinations will be entered in this during the rest of the pregnancy. You should always carry your Mutterpass with you during your pregnancy and bring it with you to every medical examination and delivery.
