Sachverhalt

the first step is to have it pre-certified (hereinafter: legalisation). The presidents of the regional courts certify official signatures of documents issued by courts, notaries and judicial authorities in the respective regional court district, such as divorce decrees, powers of attorney.

Pre-certification confirms the authenticity of the signature and seal of the issuer of a German public document, as well as, as a rule, the capacity in which the signatory of the document has acted.

Final certification

Once the pre-certification has taken place (first step), the documents are finally certified by the Federal Office of Administration on behalf of the Federal Foreign Office in the second step. The documents can then be presented to the foreign mission abroad for final processing (legalisation) (third step). If final certification by the Federal Office of Administration is not required, legalisation is already carried out in the second step by the diplomatic mission or consular post of the country in which the document is to be used.

Note: If the apostille is recognised in a foreign country as proof of the authenticity of your documents, you only need this form of legalisation and the time-consuming legalisation with preliminary and final authentication is not required.

Attention! The authenticity of the issuing person's signature must be confirmed with the preliminary authentication of the document, otherwise no final authentication by the Federal Office of Administration is possible.
