Sachverhalt

In addition, a number of documents must be compiled for the plan annex.

Submission to the court

- The plan drafter submits the insolvency plan with the complete annex to the competent insolvency court. This can already be done with the application for the opening of insolvency proceedings.
- The court examines the plan and schedules a discussion and consultation meeting.
- All parties involved are given an insight into the plan.

Voting

After the discussion at the scheduled date, the authorised parties vote on the insolvency plan. If share or membership rights of the debtor's stakeholders are included in the plan, they also have the right to vote. Voting takes place independently in each group of participants with a simple majority of votes, which is calculated according to the amount of the respective claim.

If not all groups vote in favour, the plan is nevertheless deemed to have been accepted, provided that the group that votes against is not disadvantaged by the arrangements made. The decision is made by the insolvency court.

The debtor concerned expressly or tacitly agrees to the insolvency plan.

Acceptance and confirmation / cancellation of the insolvency proceedings

Once the court has received the necessary approvals, the debtor is heard

- of the debtor,
- the insolvency administrator and
- the creditors' committee (if applicable).

The court may then confirm the plan. Once the insolvency plan has been legally confirmed, the court
