Application for authorisation to practise medicine professionally without a licence in accordance with the Heilpraktikergesetz (HeilprG)

If you would like to work in the field of medicine in Germany, you need a medical licence (Approbation) or a licence in accordance with the Heilpraktikergesetz (Heilpraktikergesetz - HeilprG).

Heilpraktiker is not a regulated training profession; there is no state final examination. In order to obtain a Heilpraktiker licence, you must fulfil legally defined minimum requirements and generally undergo a knowledge check by the public health department.

Modul

Sachverhalt

Note : The activity of a non-medical practitioner is a liberal profession. If you wish to open a practice, you must comply with the relevant regulations.

(Approbation) in accordance with the
Heilpraktikergesetz: EUR 110.00 to EUR 380.00

- Costs for the knowledge check: EUR 100.00 to EUR 608.00

You may incur additional costs for the required documents and notarised documents.

Verfahrensablauf

Application

- You must apply for authorisation in writing. First find out whether the competent authority has application forms available. Depending on what the authority offers, you can also download the application form from Amt24 (-> Online application and forms).
- Compile all the necessary supporting documents (see "Required documents") and submit them to the competent authority with your application.

If necessary, the responsible office will request further documents from you.

Checking the application documents

- If the documents are complete and all requirements are met, the responsible regulatory office will forward the application to the health authority of the district of Görlitz for a knowledge check.

Knowledge check

- All candidates from Saxony take the knowledge test on the specified date at the Görlitz district health authority. The written part is taken in Zittau, the oral part in Löbau.
- Please have the notification from the health authority and your valid identity card or passport ready for the examination date.

Issue of the licence

- You will receive written confirmation of the result of the examination and a fee notice.
- If you have fulfilled the requirements, the public order office will send you the licence certificate as soon as you have paid the administrative fee.
- The licence entitles you to practise medicine without a licence and to use the professional title "Heilpraktiker".

If you fail the knowledge test, you have the option of applying for the licence again.
