The amusement tax is a local expenditure tax that cities and municipalities can levy. The basis of the taxation is the financial expenditure of persons for attending certain events or using certain offers (amusements). The amusement tax is levied on the organiser or provider of the entertainment. The best-known forms of amusement tax are the so-called card tax and the gaming machine tax.

The following events in particular may be subject to amusement tax in the city or municipal area:

- Dance events of a commercial nature
- Striptease events, beauty dances and performances of a similar kind
- sporting events of a professional or commercial nature
- commercial film screenings
- the gambling of money and material assets in gambling clubs, casinos and similar establishments
- the setting up/operation of music, show, joke, game, and skill or similar apparatus in amusement arcades and similar enterprises as well as in public houses or pubs, clubrooms, canteens or similar rooms or in other places open to the public

The tax does not apply to
