other parent must later repay the advance if they do not pay maintenance, although they could pay maintenance in full or in part.

The responsible maintenance advance office checks annually whether you are entitled to maintenance advance.

You must answer the relevant questions and submit documents for the check.

Inform the maintenance advance office immediately of any changes in your circumstances during the entire period in which you are receiving benefits. Contact the maintenance advance office, even if you are unsure. This will help you to avoid possible reclaims of benefits.

Erforderliche Unterlagen

- Proof of failure to pay maintenance
- If applicable, proof of the income of both parents

Voraussetzungen

- You and your child live together in Germany
- You already receive maintenance advance.
- You are a single parent and live with your child in the same household.
- You are raising your child alone and clearly have the main responsibility for raising your child (no alternating model)
- You are not (newly) married
- The other parent pays no or only irregular maintenance to your child or only maintenance that is less than the maintenance advance
- You can also receive maintenance advance if it is not clear who the child's father is. It does not matter whether there is a court judgment on paternity or an acknowledgement of paternity before the youth welfare office
- Even if you are widowed, you can receive advance maintenance payments for your child
- Foreign children are only eligible if they have certain residence permits
- The following additional requirements apply for children aged 12 to 17: Your child is not dependent on SGB II benefits Your child would not be dependent on SGB II benefits with the maintenance advance or if you receive SGB II benefits, you must also have your own
