Migration counseling for adult immigrants and migration social counseling is a form of counseling for new immigrants and migrants who have been living here for some time.

Migrants who have moved to Germany in the last three years or who have received a residence permit in the last three years are considered "new immigrants".

Counseling includes

- Preparation of individual social and skills analyses,
- Preparation of support plans,
- integration support,
- placement in integration measures and socio-educational support during the course,
- Assistance in organizing childcare during course participation and
- Conclusion and monitoring of integration agreements (on a voluntary basis by agreement between client and counselor).

The counseling includes legal residence, social, educational and psychosocial issues. It serves to support integration. The advice centers work closely with the Jobcenter on issues of professional integration. Migration social counseling also includes crisis intervention in migration-specific crisis situations.

The recommendations for action have been in place in Kiel since 2007. The annual integration report also includes the status of implementation of the recommendations for action. The Forum for Migrants of the City of Kiel critically monitors the implementation of the recommendations for action and submits a statement for the integration report.
