Teaser	If you wish to sell over-the-counter medicines outside of pharmacies, you must register this with the competent authority.
Volltext	If you wish to trade in over-the-counter medicines, you do not require a license; all you need to do is register with the competent authority. All companies in which over-the-counter medicines are manufactured, stored, packaged or placed on the market are subject to supervision by the competent authorities. The competent authority must ensure that the relevant legal standards are observed. This is carried out by means of regular unannounced inspections for which a fee is charged or inspections on an ad hoc basis. The facilities, companies or other persons have a far-reaching obligation to tolerate and cooperate. If they do not comply with the statutory regulations, the competent authority can initiate appropriate measures in accordance with the Medicinal Products Act. This includes verbal or written orders to prevent or eliminate deficiencies, and violations can also be punished as an administrative offense with a warning, warning fine, fine or as a criminal offense.

Sachverhalt

Voraussetzungen

Proof of expertise Over-the-counter medicines may be sold outside pharmacies provided that the person operating the business, the legal representative or the person responsible for the management or sale of the over-the-counter medicines has the necessary expertise and can provide proof of this. A competent person must be present at each establishment and must also be present during normal sales hours so that qualified advice and proper sales can be guaranteed. If this is not possible, the medicinal products must be suitably withdrawn from the customer's access and sale for the duration of the absence of the competent person (e.g. via lockable shelf cabinets). The details of the scope and proof of expertise are regulated. The expertise includes knowledge and skills regarding the proper filling, packaging, labeling, storage and placing on the market of medicinal products that are approved for sale outside pharmacies and knowledge of the regulations applicable to these medicinal products. Expertise is not required when placing finished medicinal products on the retail market that may be dispensed in tourist traffic, that are used to prevent pregnancy or sexually transmitted diseases in humans or certain disinfectants that are intended exclusively for external use or oxygen in oxygen cylinders. The required expertise can be demonstrated either by a corresponding examination, by examination certificates for relevant professional training or in some other way. The examination certificates for the specializations

- pharmacy
- chemistry
- biology
- human or veterinary medicine from universities as well as the professional training

- to become a trainee pharmacist
- as a pharmaceutical-technical assistant
- to become a druggist
- to become a pharmaceutical engineer
- to become a pharmacy assistant
