Teaser	Anyone who is unable to finance his/her necessary living expenses from his/her pension can apply for basic income support in old age and in the event of reduced earning capacity.
Volltext	If your income (e.g. pension) and assets are not sufficient to finance your necessary living expenses in old age or in the event of reduced earning capacity, you can claim basic security benefits. To do so, you must submit an application. The benefits cover in particular the necessary living expenses including reasonable expenses for accommodation and heating. You can claim basic security benefits for old age and reduced earning capacity: • Persons born before January 1, 1947, upon reaching the age limit of 65. • Persons born after December 31, 1946, on reaching the age limit of 65 years + x months. For persons born between 1947 and 1967, a statutory graduated system applies with regard to reaching the age limit. • Persons who have reached the age of 18 and whose permanent total reduction in earning capacity has been established. You can also apply for basic security benefits if you live in a home (inpatient facility).
Erforderliche Unterlagen	• identity card, • Documents about your current income (e.g. notification of a pension payment, proof of salary, maintenance payments) and your assets (e.g. savings contracts).

Verfahrensablauf
Bearbeitungsdauer
Frist	• Basic security benefits begin when the application is submitted. There are no back payments for periods prior to the application. • Basic security benefits are regularly granted for 12 calendar months and then reviewed. If personal or financial circumstances change during the approval period, the changes must be reported. • Increased benefits are paid from the first of the month in which the change is notified at the earliest. It is therefore important to notify changes, such as an increase in rent, immediately.
