| Volltext                   | Legal advice and legal proceedings are subject to a fee. Anyone who is unable to raise the necessary funds for personal and financial reasons has the option of applying for legal aid or legal aid. Counseling assistance: Advice assistance is granted on application under certain conditions for the exercise of rights outside of court proceedings. It can be granted in the following areas of law:: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Civil law (for example tenancy law, traffic accidents, family law),</li> <li>• administrative law,</li> <li>• constitutional law,</li> <li>• criminal law, regulatory offense law and</li> <li>• labor and social law.</li> </ul> Prerequisites: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• The person seeking legal advice cannot afford the funds required for legal advice according to his or her personal and financial circumstances,</li> <li>• there are no other options available for help that the person seeking legal advice can reasonably be expected to make use of, and</li> <li>• the exercise of rights is not wanton.</li> </ul> Procedure: The person seeking legal assistance must submit an application for legal aid. To do so, he or she can contact the legal application office of the competent local court. The person seeking legal assistance must submit a declaration of their personal and financial circumstances. If the requirements for the granting of legal aid are met, the local court can issue a legal aid certificate. With a certificate of legal aid, the person seeking legal assistance can then consult a lawyer of their choice and obtain legal advice |
