Teaser	Price audits are intended to protect the public sector from excessive prices.
Volltext	Price law audits are a task of the public sector to ensure appropriate remuneration in public procurement. They are part of commercial law. The public sector must be protected from excessive prices. Prices may be excessive if • higher prices are demanded from the contracting authority for marketable services than from civilian customers or • in the case of contracts at cost price, if the prices charged exceed the costs of providing the service (including profit). The costs are those that are appropriate according to the guidelines for price determination based on cost prices (LSP). Preisüberwachung (PÜ) Kiel acts as a neutral expert on the basis of the Price Law Ordinance within the framework of a legal mandate or by way of administrative assistance for public clients (e.g. the German Federal Armed Forces). At the request of the competent authority, a contractor must provide evidence of the price. Contracts awarded by the federal government, the federal states, municipalities and associations of municipalities as well as other legal entities under public law are audited. In addition to supplies and services, this also includes rents and leases. Prices of construction services are no longer audited (VO PR 1/72 repealed in 1999).
