The mere suspicion of certain animal diseases must be reported to official veterinarians.

Volltext

As a private or commercial livestock owner, you are obliged to report certain animal diseases. It is not only the outbreak (i.e. the detection of the disease by an official veterinarian) that must be reported, but also the mere suspicion of an outbreak.

If you suspect that an animal disease may have broken out, report this immediately by telephone or in person to the competent authority. You must also immediately take all possible measures to prevent the spread of the disease (e.g. stabling animals, separating "suspect" animals from others, ensuring that no animals leave the premises).

Once the suspicion has been reported, it is investigated by the competent authority. If it is indeed an animal disease, the necessary countermeasures (e.g. quarantine) will be taken in the individual case.

Which animal diseases are notifiable animal diseases is regulated in the Ordinance on Notifiable Animal Diseases.

In addition to notifiable animal diseases, there are other animal diseases that are not controlled by the state, but whose occurrence is officially recorded. A list of notifiable animal diseases can be found on the "Animal diseases" overview page of the Federal Ministry of Food and Agriculture.

Hinweise	According to the Animal Diseases Act, compensation can be granted by the Animal Diseases Fund for livestock losses caused by animal diseases. However, this is subject to the condition that the epidemic report has been submitted immediately and the number of animals kept (horses, cattle, pigs, sheep, goats, poultry) has been reported to the animal epidemic fund and the contribution has been paid. https://www.tsf-sh.de/ https://www.schleswig-holstein.de/DE/Fachinhalte/T/tierschutz/kontakt.html https://www.tsf-sh.de/ https://www.schleswig-holstein.de/DE/Fachinhalte/T/tierschutz/kontakt.html
