Volltext	In Schleswig-Holstein, dangerous dogs must be kept on a lead in public and wear a muzzle. Dangerous dogs can run free on your own property. However, the property must be secured in such a way that the dogs cannot escape. According to the law on the keeping of dogs (HundeG), all dogs that have bitten a person or an animal, have chased or torn animals in an uncontrolled manner or have repeatedly jumped at people in a dangerous manner or shown other dangerous behavior are dangerous. A permit is required to keep a dangerous dog. The permit is only issued if the owner is of legal age and has the necessary reliability, personal suitability and expertise: • For example, a dog owner must not have a criminal record for significant criminal offenses. • Children or people who are not physically capable of safely handling a dangerous dog are unsuitable for keeping a dangerous dog. • Also unsuitable are alcohol or drug addicts as well as women and men who are legally incompetent. • According to the law, an expert is someone who can safely keep and handle a dangerous dog based on their knowledge and skills. Competence is acquired by successfully passing a theoretical and practical competence test with the dog classified as dangerous. The dog must also have liability insurance and be

Hinweise	In accordance with § 14 Para. 4 HundeG, the competent authority can grant an exemption from the muzzle requirement for certain dangerous dogs upon application if the dog's ability to behave in a socially acceptable manner has been proven by a temperament test (§ 13 HundeG). Upon application, the competent authority may determine that the conditions for classifying the dog as dangerous no longer exist and revoke the classification (§ 7 Para. 4 HundeG) if a veterinarian determines that the dog is no longer dangerous, the dangerousness has been legally established for at least two years and a temperament test that is at least one year old has established the dog's social compatibility.
