acquiring and maintaining practical knowledge and skills, benefits to promote communication, mobility benefits, aids, visiting allowances).

For the purpose of managing, monitoring the effectiveness and documenting the participation process, the integration assistance provider draws up an overall plan, in particular for the implementation of the individual services or an individual service, together with the person entitled to benefits, a person they trust, possibly with the attending doctor, the health authority, the state doctor, the youth welfare office and the offices of the Federal Employment Agency immediately after the benefits have been determined.

People with disabilities who have more than temporary physical, mental, intellectual or sensory impairments and who are significantly restricted in their equal participation in society (significant disability) or are at risk of such a significant disability are entitled to benefits. Integration assistance benefits are subordinate to benefits from other social benefit providers or rehabilitation providers (e.g. health insurance providers, pension insurance providers, the Federal Employment Agency, accident insurance providers).
