considered to be given for the rescue service organisations named in the Rescue Service Act.

- Copies of the vehicle registration certificates showing that the ambulances are recognised as such;
- Proof of the main inspection of the ambulances;
- Proof that the ambulances are properly manned by two suitable persons (e.g. duty roster, certificate from the divisional committee);
- Proof of proper hygiene conditions (e.g. by submitting a hygiene plan drawn up in consultation with a hygienist) and
- possibly a remuneration agreement with the funding organisations (you can also submit this at a later date).

Note: In special cases, the competent authority may request further documents.

Voraussetzungen

- Ensuring the safety and efficiency of the business: The economic circumstances of the business are decisive. The economic basis for the provision of business equipment, vehicles and personnel must be sufficient
- Reliability of the applicant as an entrepreneur or the person appointed to manage the business: Due to the legal interests of life and health involved in patient transport, strict rules apply to reliability. The person must therefore be able to demonstrate that they will fulfil their responsibilities.
- Professional aptitude of the applicant as an entrepreneur or of the person appointed to manage the company: Professional aptitude must be proven by an examination or by appropriate activity in a road passenger transport company. In addition, the applicant must have passed the examination to become a paramedic or provide evidence of three years' employment in a rescue service organisation with active participation in the rescue service.
- Signing of the digital radio participation agreement
- Compliance with the regulations regarding the ambulances used and their staffing: The ambulances used must be specially equipped and recognised as ambulances according to the vehicle registration certificate. The competent licensing authority decides on this. The ambulances must be manned by two

- Obligation to observe the integrated control centre's switching monopoly.

Note: The authorising authority may issue further ancillary provisions at its own discretion. These can

- regulate the cooperation between the companies and with the divisional committee for the rescue service and
- oblige the companies to document the transport orders and their processing.

If a reserve vehicle is to be approved for an existing licence, the licensing authority may impose further ancillary provisions.

You must notify the competent authority of the commencement of operations, stating the area of operation and the individual vehicles, each with a licence plate number.

You must also ensure that your provisions for patient transport are included for information purposes in the area plan for the rescue service area
