Modul

Sachverhalt

The State Education Authority commissions a special needs teacher with a special needs assessment. This report should also include the parents' considerations about the appropriate school offer for their child.

Once the report has been drawn up, the relevant state education authority informs the parents of the result and whether they are entitled to special educational provision.

If the school supervisory authority rejects the determination of entitlement, it informs the parents of its decision, stating the reasons.

If there is an entitlement, the parents can choose whether their child is to be taught in an inclusive educational provision in the general school or in a special needs education and guidance centre (SBBZ). They are advised in detail by the competent State Education Authority on the possible places of learning and informed about the further procedural steps after exercising the right of choice.

- If the parents choose an inclusive educational offer, the competent State Education Authority tries to provide such an offer within the framework of its school offer planning. In an educational pathway conference, the necessary arrangements are discussed with all parties involved and the parents are made an appropriate educational offer for their child. If the parents agree to the proposal, they receive a corresponding notice and enrol their child in the agreed general school.
- If the parents decide in favour of education in a special education and guidance centre (SBBZ), they receive a corresponding notice and register their child in the relevant SBBZ.

Bearbeitungsdauer
