Teaser	Swiss nationals do not require a residence permit.
Volltext	Swiss nationals do not require a residence permit. To enter the federal territory • they require a valid identity card or passport and • must register with the relevant registration office if they wish to remain resident in Germany. If they apply for a residence permit, one can be issued to them. However, this is not mandatory. You must submit the application to the relevant immigration authority. Family members who claim a right of residence on the basis of the EU-Switzerland Agreement must report their residence to the immigration authority. Note: If family members do not report their residence, this is an administrative offence.
Erforderliche Unterlagen	• Identity card or passport • if you are basing your right of residence on a specific relationship to a specific person: Proof of the marriage or family relationship
