Volltext

You are only allowed to hunt if you have a valid hunting licence. To obtain a hunting licence, you must successfully pass the hunting examination.

In the examination, you must demonstrate sufficient knowledge in five examination subjects:

- Animal species, wildlife biology, game management and agriculture and silviculture including game damage prevention
- Weapons law, weapons technology and handling hunting weapons (including handguns)
- Hunting operations, in particular hunting practice, types of hunting, hunting equipment, fishing gear, handling and use of hunting dogs, animal welfare and species-appropriate keeping of hunting dogs, safety regulations for hunting
- Hunting, animal welfare, nature conservation and landscape conservation law, hunting ethics
- Game diseases and treatment of hunted game (in particular recognising the most important game diseases, necessary hygiene measures and assessing the health safety of game as a foodstuff)

You can acquire this knowledge in a recognised training course in preparation for the hunting examination.

The course includes theoretical and practical training. It comprises at least 130 hours plus shooting training.

Erforderliche Unterlagen

- Proof of sufficient liability insurance
- if you are a minor: written declaration of consent from your legal representatives

Hinweise	Prospective falconers can take a restricted hunting test. In particular, the shooting test is not required. If they want to apply for an annual hunting licence after passing the restricted hunting test, they must complete the missing sections of the test. In addition to the limited hunting test, falconers also require a special falconry test, which cannot be taken in Baden-Württemberg. Further information can be obtained from the falconry associations.
