Volltext	Highly qualified foreign nationals who wish to pursue employment in Germany that is commensurate with their qualifications can obtain an EU Blue Card. In most cases, however, they will then also require a national visa to enter Germany. Exception: Citizens of EU member states have access to the labor market due to their right to freedom of movement. They can be self-employed or employed in Germany under the right of establishment or freedom of movement for workers. This also applies to other nationals of the European Economic Area (EEA) and Swiss nationals. You can obtain the EU Blue Card for a maximum of four years when it is first issued. If your employment contract has a duration of less than four years, you will receive the EU Blue Card for the duration of the employment contract plus three months. Please note: If you want to change your job in the first two years after the EU Blue Card has been issued, you must obtain permission from the immigration authorities. https://www.auswaertiges-amt.de/de/service/visa-und-aufenthalt/visa/207794 https://www.auswaertiges-amt.de/de/service/visa-und-aufenthalt/visa/207794

The representation of the Federal Republic of Germany involves the responsible immigration authority. In the visa procedure, you must provide information about your place of work in Germany. This enables the authority to check whether the Federal Employment Agency needs to be involved in the employment.

Before your entry visa expires, you must apply for an EU Blue Card at the immigration authority. If you were allowed to enter the country without a visa, you must apply for the EU Blue Card at the immigration authority within three months of entering the country. The foreigners authority in whose district you usually reside is responsible for you (depending on where you live, this may be the district administrator of the district or the mayor of the city in which you live).
