Volltext	Within the framework of youth welfare, mothers and fathers are entitled to counseling on partnership issues if they are responsible for or actually care for a child or adolescent. The counseling is intended to help build up a life together as partners in the family, to overcome conflicts and crises in the family, and, in the case of separation or divorce, to create the conditions for the exercise of parental responsibility in a way that is conducive to the well-being of the child or adolescent. In the case of separation and divorce, parents shall be supported in the development of a mutually agreeable concept for the exercise of parental care and parental responsibility with the appropriate participation of the child or adolescent concerned; this concept may also serve as the basis for a settlement or a court decision in family court proceedings.
