Teaser	Registration of an association in the register of associations to obtain legal capacity
Volltext	The register of associations is public and has the purpose of making the factual and legal circumstances of associations entered in the register of associations easily ascertainable for third parties at any time, thereby increasing security in legal transactions. In order for the association to become a legally capable association within the meaning of the German Civil Code after it has been founded, you must register it with the local court for entry in the register of associations. Upon completion of this registration, the association will be listed as a registered association. The registration must be effected by means of a publicly certified declaration. This means that the declaration must be in writing and the signatures of the board members must be certified by a notary public.
