Sachverhalt

- The (imminent) mental handicap must be confirmed by
 - Your child must not yet be 18 years old
- Mental disabilities, unlike other disabilities, are difficult to identify. Therefore, the World Health Organization (WHO) has created an overview of medical diagnoses (ICD) that can be used to describe a mental disability. Mental disabilities include, for example:
- psychoses that are not physically justifiable
 - diseases or injuries of the brain
 - seizure disorders or
 - of other diseases or physical impairments
 - mental disorders as a result of
 - Addictive disorders
 - Schizophrenic, delusional and affective disorders
 - Stress and adjustment disorders
 - Neuroses
 - Personality and behavioral disorders

Kosten

The costs for the assistance are borne by the youth welfare office.

Verfahrensablauf

In order to receive these benefits, you must contact the responsible youth welfare office. A specialist will advise you in the course of a personal interview whether

- integration assistance according to 35a SGB VIII is possible for your child and/or
- other or, if necessary, further forms of assistance are possible.

If integration assistance according to § 35a SGB VIII is possible, you must apply for it:

- Assistance provided outside the family (inpatient assistance) requires the consent of the legal guardian(s), as they determine the child's place of residence.

The decisive factor for the approval of services is whether the identified disorder is actually a mental disability. For clarification, the youth welfare office obtains an opinion from one of the following persons:

- Doctor of child and adolescent psychiatry and psychotherapy,
- child and adolescent psychotherapist, a psychotherapist with further training in the treatment of children and adolescents
- physician or psychological psychotherapist who has special experience in the field of mental disorders in children and adolescents.

Based on this opinion, the youth welfare office decides

- whether and in what form it will grant the services of the integration assistance and
- whether other assistance may be necessary.

If the assistance is granted, all parties involved jointly draw up an assistance plan. This plan specifies, among other things

- what the child's or young person's needs are,
- which goals are to be achieved by the integration assistance,
- how long the assistance is to be provided, and
- which services are to be implemented.

The duration of the integration assistance services depends on the severity of the mental disability. It varies from case to case.
