Furthermore, the operating license for a vehicle expires if a component is subject to mandatory approval but you have not complied with this requirement or if you have not complied with installation regulations, restrictions or requirements for technical modifications.

Operating licenses issued for company vehicles are always individual licenses and only apply to the use of the vehicle as a company vehicle.

If you use vehicles on public roads that do not have an operating permit or whose operating permit has expired, this constitutes an administrative offense and the licensing authority can also prohibit operation and, if necessary, cancel the license plate. In preparation for its decision, the administrative authority may order the submission of an expert opinion from an officially recognized expert, motor vehicle inspector or test engineer on the vehicle's compliance with regulations or the presentation of the vehicle and, if necessary, issue several such orders.

An inspection sticker for the main inspection may not be issued.

The "national individual vehicle approval certificate" is issued by the technical inspection authority or the technical service together with the certificate for obtaining an individual operating permit and handed over to you. Proof of the operating permit for a vehicle is provided by the responsible registration authority by means of an entry in the "national individual vehicle approval certificate" with signature and seal.
